1. The Neubrandenburg-Trollenhagen (N 54/U 67) airfield was being expended on the north by the Waren (N 54/U 35) Bauunion Firm. The sloping ground there was being graded. The work was temporarily stopped because of severe frost. The workers, who formerly had been assigned to construction at the Rechlin (N 54/U 33) airfield, cleaned debris from the field. Local residents stated that the field buildings had been completely stripped between 1945 and 1947, and that the field and the buildings had been surveyed in 1948. According to field workers and Trollenhagen residents, the field was occupied by 60 to 70 fighters which had made many flights on preceding days. (1) The Soviet soldiers allegedly said that they had formerly been stationed in Staaken (N 53/Z 65).
2. Biplanes and two-seat fighters whose number could not be determined were observed at the field on 24 January 1950. Description of the two-seat fighters [REDACTED] radial engine; wings and elevator assembly trapezoidal; cut-off wing tops; landing gear retractable inward; tail wheel retractable; a bulge the size of an automobile headlight set under fuselage; closely aft of engine a streamlined body (3), about one meter long, set under fuselage, aft of landing gear; at each wing a bulge with a rod protruding in front (armament?); no antenna wire; some planes had a vertical rod on the cockpit with a cone-like body facing forward fitted at third quarter of its height.
